

Open Up

I don't know where I'm going anymore
Floating around on a paper-mâché boat in a storm
The earthquake strikes but this one I'm not ready for
I wonder what will happen if I open up my door
I wonder what will happen if I open up my door

Not sure that I can give anymore
Pockets empty and the heart is poor and raw
Hope feels shredded as if by some brutal claw
I wonder what will happen if I open up my door
I wonder what will happen if I open up my door

Everyone loses someone in the end for sure
No one can forever elude the lonely edge of dawn
We gave love a chance and we'll do it again
We'll get another chance when we step outside our door
We'll get another chance when we open up our door

Simon Kerr © 29th October, 2003

A simple tune, but one that people seem to really like, so it gets to be among the chosen few on the album. Came to me very quickly one day, and I always had a sense that it was meant for someone in particular, and that it would have some significance for that person (yikes, I sound like an astrologer...!)